Open Elitis Group Licence

Elitis Copyright

Version 2020.3

The Open Elitis Group Licence – the OEGL – aims to provide restrictive terms for smaller development groups.

Section 0 – Definitions

a) OEGL: This licence – the Open Elitis Group Licence;
b) Program: The copyrighted material licensed under the OEGL;
c) Author(s): The copyright holders of the licensed Program;
d) Original Source Code: The Program's code as it was distributed by the Author(s);
e) User: The end-user of the Program.

Section 1 – Distribution

You are allowed to redistribute the Program – modified or not – under the following conditions:

a) You credit the Author(s);
b) You include a link and/or copy of the Original Source Code and the OEGL.

You cannot make a profit off of the Program (unless explicitly permitted by the Author(s) in writing).

Section 2 – Modification

Modifying the Program is permitted under the following conditions:

a) You state all changes;
b) The Author(s)'s credit remains visible to the User;
c) A link and/or copy of the Original Source Code is visible to the User.

The licence cannot be modified or changed in a way that lessens the restrictions.

Section 3 – Relicensing

You are allowed to add further restrictions to the licence, however removing limitations is not permitted.

You must state all changes.

Section 4 – Liability

In absolutely no circumstance – unless legally required – will the Author(s) or any other party who modified the Program under the OEGL be accountable for any damages, even if the User was informed previously.

Section 5 – Warranty

The Program does not come with a warranty of any kind.

In no situation will the Author(s) be accountable for any defects or inabilities to perform certain actions within the Program; it is provided "as is".

Section 6 – Licence Revisions

In the event that the OEGL is updated, only the Program's stated version will apply. If you release newer versions of the Program with an updated version of the OEGL, older versions will not follow the newer licence.

How to Apply the OEGL

To follow the general standard, create a file named LICENSE (not LICENCE) and input this licence's contents.

At the top of all copyrighted files, adding a notice like the following is recommended:

```
/************************************************
*                  Program Name v1.0               *
*  Copyright © <year> <author(s)>. All rights reserved. *
*          Licensed under the OEGL; see LICENSE.        *
***************************************************/

You should update the copyright year to correspond with the last modification of the file.
